| WORKING PAPERS        | “Exploring the Differential Impact of Repealing the ACA Individual Mandate by Health Status”. Job Market Paper Abstract: Health insurance mandates are designed to mitigate adverse selection by encouraging enrollment among relatively healthy individuals. This paper examines how the 2019 repeal of the Affordable Care Act (ACA) individual mandate penalty affected insurance participation, Marketplace premiums, out-of-pocket premium spending, and consumer surplus by health status. Using a two-way fixed effects design, I find that the repeal increased the probability of becoming newly uninsured by 0.56 percentage points (27 percent relative to the pre-reform mean), with nearly all of the increase driven by relatively healthy consumers. Benchmark Marketplace premiums increased by approximately $739, while average out-of-pocket premium spending decreased by $284.60 as ACA premium subsidies offset much of the premium increase. A consumer surplus analysis shows that, without premium subsidies, relatively sick consumers bear most of the welfare losses from adverse selection. But accounting for subsidies substantially mitigates these losses, demonstrating that premium subsidies alter the distributional consequences of adverse selection. “Does the Tobacco 21 Minimum Legal Sales Age Policy Improve Respiratory Health?
